From the Paulpit

I have a riddle for all of you today, and here is the riddle: What is greater than God, more evil than the devil, the poor have it, the rich need it, and if you eat it you will die? Now if you can't figure it out, you need to ask the nearest five year old because 83% of kindergarten children come up with the answer, while only 17% of university students are able to figure it out. Now why do you suppose that is? I will welcome any theories as to why, but here is mine: Sometimes the truth is far simpler than what we would like to believe. It is true of course that not everything is black and white, but perhaps there is less gray area than what most adults would like to believe. I find this to be especially true when it comes to morality. Sometimes, people's thinking can become so convoluted, that it gets in the way of the obvious. But you are probably wondering, so what is the answer to the riddle? I guess you are just going to have to read the rest of the article to find out.

In the Gospel this weekend, Jesus is presented with a question, or a riddle that seemingly has no correct answer. If he answers no, it is not lawful to pay the census tax to Caesar, than Jesus could have been accused of sedition by the Roman authorities. And if Jesus says "yes," than he could have been regarded as a traitor to his own people. Jesus of course successfully avoids the trap by asking the question, "Whose image and inscription is on the coin?" When the Pharisees say that it is Caesar's, Jesus replies by saying, "Then give to Caesar what is Caesar's, and give to God what is God's." In effect, Jesus avoids the trap by rejecting the premise. The premise is that the question presented is an either/or question. Jesus points out that this is not an either/or question, it is a both/and question. We do have a duty, and it is to both God and secular authority. The answer is far more simple than what anyone would have thought.

If there seemingly is no answer, then maybe its because there isn't one. Sometimes we can make things more complex than what they need to be. And so in answer to the riddle, if all you can come up with is nothing, then maybe you're right.

God Bless,

Fr. Paul Ballien

SUNDAY REFLECTION

Give Caesar's to Caesar; Give God's to God

This Week....

Paul and Isaiah both express faith in the Holy Spirit to carry out God's plan. Isaiah and Matthew show us that God's plan can exist side by side with a civil or governmental plan. We are wise to be mindful of the balance.

For your Reflection....

The Pharisees and the Herodians try to trip Jesus up, but he won't fall for their set up. They ask him to choose between the worldly and the holy, between the political and the religious. Jesus simply says that we need to give to each what is due to each.

- Do you ever experience a conflict between what your faith says and what your country says? If something is legal, is it always moral? And if something is moral, is it always legal? What is an example of such a conflict?
- Do you ever experience a conflict between what your civil community says and what your faith community says? If something is an acceptable practice in your school or in your circle of friends, does that mean it's always right to do? And is the right thing always acceptable in your social situation? What is an example of such a conflict? Some people try to live entirely in one arena, and they are totally against the other.
- Do you know anyone who completely rejects all religion and talk of God and only clings to the physical, modern world? What is that attitude like?
- Do you know anyone who completely rejects all earthly things and clings only the religious and spiritual? What is that attitude like?
- Do you know anyone who lives a good balance of both the spiritual and the earthly? What is that attitude like?
